For South Africa Natives

Strict Controls In Self-Rule Plan

CAPETOWN, South Africa (Reuters) — A new pattern of government policy toward South Africa's 8,000,000 natives is emerging.

It seems to be based broadly on a greater measure of self-rule for day-to-day native affairs. Cornerstone of the system is the Bantu Authorities Act of 1951.

This act provides that in the tribal areas or native reserves, tribal authorities will be set up consisting of chiefs and headmen chosen in keeping with tribal tradition but subject to the approval of the government.

Set above these authorities, estimated at between 400 and 500, will be regional authorities and in turn above these will be territorial ethnic authorities each of which will be the governing body of a separate Bantu or African nation.

The membership and actions of these bodies will be subject to considerable powers of veto vested in the minister of Bantu administration and development.

Efforts will be made by the government to establish links between the urban natives—those working in the cities and towns—and the territorial or ethnic authorities of the ethnic groups from which they come.

The government hopes that the new system will meet the growing urge among Africans for self-government.

Fight Jazz With Jazz, Red Idea

BUDAPEST (Reuters) — After having tried to ban American jazz outright and failed, the Communist countries of eastern Europe apparently are hoping to restrict its influence by a compromise.

The conductor of Radio Budapest's dance orchestra, Emre Szoldos told an East-bloc jazz conference in Prague that the Communist countries will try to build up their own type of jazz.

CIRCULATING TUNES

He said that every three months they would circulate among themselves their current hit tunes, with the aim of improving the standard of jazz—East European-style.

At the same time, Western music would be allowed, "but we should be critical," he added.

JAZZ IT UP

In Russia, the Soviet press has been urging composers to write music to woo young Russians away from "corrupting influences."

The Russians tend to use strong terms when condemning the influence Western-style music has on Mosco's Tin Pan Alley.

In recent press criticism, present-day Russian light music was described as "trivial, vulgar and imitative of the worst examples of foreign jazz."

Deep Freeze Shrinks Slightly

The deep-freeze which has gripped most of Canada for the past month is shrinking a bit. Central Canada, however, should be prepared for another three weeks at least of weather that keeps people indoors, says the U.S. weather bureau long-range forecast.

Still Barely Below Record

Living Costs Take Second Tiny Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — Living costs were shaved during December for the second consecutive month, reducing the consumer price index by one-tenth of a point to 126.1 on Jan. 1 from 126.2 on Dec. 1, the bureau of statistics reported yesterday.

The dip—which followed a similar decline in the Nov. 1-Dec. 1 period — was caused largely by post-Christmas clothing sales along with lower year-end prices for 1958-model appliances.

The index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, now is one-fifth of a point below the all-time high of 126.3 recorded on Nov. 1.

Although the total decline was relatively small, it was the first two-month decline in the index in a year.

The index of average industrial wages and salaries on Nov. 1—latest date for which figures are available — was 166.6, a rise of one point from 165.6 on Nov. 1 and up 5.4 points from 161.2 on Dec. 1, 1957.

While living costs were generally down, food prices edged up slightly, mainly because of a continuing rise in the price of beef, offsetting other declines. Home ownership costs also rose.

The food column rose one-tenth of a point to 122.3 from 122.2; the shelter column by three-tenths of a point to 140.2 from 139.9.

For Serious Outsider

Attractive Booklet Tells About Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—The serious outsider interested in Canada will have an attractive handbook as his guide.

A new edition of Canada From Sea to Sea has been issued by the external affairs department. It has ordered 200,000 English-language and 100,000 French-language copies of the paper-covered book for distribution abroad.

A department spokesman said the 143-page book may eventually be translated into several languages. There are plans for Spanish and German editions next year. Later, editions may be translated into Dutch, Portuguese, Norwegian and Danish.

A. D. Bryce of the department's publications section said the book is not so much for general use as for universities, people teaching others about Canada and businessmen.

Toronto journalist Pierre Berton wrote the text and graphic artist Paul Arthur of Ottawa designed the publication. It is well illustrated with black and white photographs.

The eye-catching book is packed with facts and includes a map of Canada attached to its back cover.

Full-color reproductions of eight Canadian paintings range from the traditional work of J. A. Fraser (1838-1898) to the work of contemporary artists, including a non-objective work by Quebec's Alfred Pellan.

A LOVELIER YOU

By Mary Sue Miller

SPRING REDUCING SERIES. If a woman has gained as much as an inch around her midriff, she had better start today on a slimming routine, or spring fashions will catch her with a bulge where it shows most. In new dresses, snug wide belts and set-in bands outline the mid-section of the figure, so that even an extra ounce there becomes a superfluity.

Two easy but effective trimmers follow: 1. Stand erect, feet together; extend left arm directly forward and right arm backward, both at shoulder level. Without moving feet or hips, twist hard in waist until arm positions are reversed. Repeat twenty times.

2. For this, you need a leather strap (two belts hooked together will do fine). Hold strap so that hands are about thirty-six inches apart and extend arms forward at shoulder level. Pulling hard on strap, fling arms high over head and back as far as possible; return to starting position and repeat twenty times.

Work with belting force and your middle will be in shape for a high-rise belting—long before spring!

MIDRIFF SLIMMERS

To solve that riddle of extra inches around your middle, send today for my leaflet, "Midriff Slimmers." It contains quick, easy reducing exercise for slimming diaphragm, waist and abdomen. Write me in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 5 cents in coin to cover handling.

Ferry Officers Endorse Terms

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officers of Canadian Pacific Coast Ferries have voted 85 per cent in favor of a wage contract calling for an aggregate increase of 17 per cent over a three-year period.

The contract also provides for a health and welfare plan and an overtime rate of payment at time and a quarter.

Dennis McKeown, secretary of the National Association of Marine Engineers, said Wednesday the contract will be signed Friday.

Negotiations with Black Ball Ferries Limited, CPR's rivals here, are expected to start within a few days.

Parents of Five Drink Acid, Die

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 38-year-old mother of five children was found dead Wednesday in her north-end home. Her husband, found lying beside her, died later in hospital.

Police said both had swallowed hydrochloric acid.

The victims were identified as May Gensorek and her husband, Stanley, 43.

Police were called after a six-year-old daughter went to a neighbor and asked for help. The oldest child is 15.

Playoffs Begin In Saanich Loop

Playoff games in the midget boys' and senior "C" men's divisions highlight Friday night's Saanich Suburban Basketball League card at Brentwood Community Hall.

Brentwood and Cordova Bay midgets meet at 8.30 p.m. in the second game of a two-game, total-point series, with the winner to advance in the Island playoffs.

Chew Excavating and Sidney open a similar series in the senior "C" men's division at 9.30. Brentwood and Sooke midget girls play a league game in the opener at 7.30.

Ship Search Goes On

HALIFAX (UPI) — An air and sea search for the missing Danish vessel Hans Hedtoft, which disappeared last Friday after striking an iceberg off the southern tip of Greenland, was scheduled to be resumed at daybreak today.

An RCAF spokesman said it was still unknown if a dark red drum with a white stripe spotted Tuesday by a search plane had come from the missing vessel. He said an evaluation of the drum was still under way.

A six-day air and sea search for the Hedtoft and her 95 passengers and crew has failed to produce any other clues.

Artists' Growth Under One Roof

By INA D. D. UHTHOFF

We are seldom given the opportunity of following the changes and development of an artist's work over a period of more than 30 years, but this is what can be done in the present exhibition of paintings of Hans Moller, a celebrated contemporary expressionist of German origin.

The works have been hung on the Gallery walls in a sequence of periods which preserve the continuity of the changes of style and approach, from the representational to the abstract.

Early studies like the portrait in oils of "Leni" show the competent work of a well-trained artist. This particular painting dates back to 1926.

Nine years later, Mr. Moller painted the small representational painting "Grey Still Life" precisely enough to convince any opponents of "modern" painting that this artist is an accomplished draughtsman as well as being a fine painter in the traditional manner. It might well be an "old master!"

* * *

That he knows his craft, must be conceded, so why should change be necessary? An artist must go on developing, there is always so much ahead. If he feels that his painting should have more vigor and freshness, he will set about finding a means of achieving this.

In the phase that follows, the picture plane becomes more important. Form in space becomes flatter and line pattern more important. Color is used arbitrarily and paint is used for its own plastic qualities.

* * *

Outline becomes more varied and sensitive until it finally takes over.

In the next group, color smudges become mere surface enrichment, balancing light against dark, coolness against warmth. The work is still to some extent representational.

All this is preliminary to the painting of the most recent canvasses in which there is no longer any identification of objects. Color becomes slabs of paint, sometimes brilliant, sometimes sombre. The yellows and reds vibrate, even the blues have their own glow and intensities. Surface texture is varied by the addition of sand and other gritty substances to the oil paint. The work has now become abstract.

* * *

As well as Hans Moller, the painter, there is Hans Moller, the designer of fabrics, and prints, of magazine covers and even of rugs.

The collection is the property of Fred Olsen of the Olsen Foundation of New Haven, Conn.

Ex-Banker's Funeral Set Today

Funeral services for retired businessman Norman Shenstone-Wilks, 1420 Beach Drive, who died Monday, will be held today at 1 p.m. at Hayward's funeral home.

A resident of Victoria for 20 years, he spent many years with the Mercantile Bank of India, serving throughout southeast Asia. During the war he served as financial adviser to the Canadian government.

He is survived by his widow, at home; a daughter, Mrs. I. M. Sherwin also of Victoria, and two brothers in England.

Spivs Are Kicking But Pocketing Loot

LONDON (AP) — London's ticket scalpers are raking in the moola while they are briskly kicking themselves. Until lately, they never realized what the traffic would bear.

"My Fair Lady," with the original cast, is playing in the Drury Lane Theatre, which seats 2,500, and you can't get a seat from a legitimate ticket agency until June, if then.

TICKETS EVERYWHERE

But every night, sidewalks leading to the Drury Lane are lined with at least 20 ticket spivs. They have tickets for every part of the theatre, and their prices are enough to make British teeth fall out.

For a 70-cent balcony seat they collect $5.60. A $2.94 seat downstairs costs $22.40. Prices range up to $112 for a four-seat box that's $44 at the box office.

London never has seen prices like those, even from spivs.

Peter Cadbury, head of the city's biggest legitimate ticket agency, thinks the black marketeers had accomplices line up at the box office when it opened.

Manager George Hoare of the Drury Lane says: "There would be no black market if the public refused to pay these fantastic prices."

Sinfonietta Coming Here

The 50-member University of Washington student "wind sinfonietta" band will be making its first appearance here Saturday.

Directed by Walter C. Welke, the band will give a performance of "complete instrumentation" of contemporary new world composers.

The concert, sponsored by the B.C. Chapter of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association, will play in Victoria High School auditorium, starting at 8 p.m.
